Keeping up with New York restaurant openings is like a never-ending game of Whac-a-Mole. In 2016, it will be no different. From Michelin-starred chefs to the next generation of cooks making their mark on the city's culinary scene, here are the restaurants you'll want to add to your (long) bucket list for the next year.

Momosan Ramen & Sake

Chef Masaharu Morimoto's employees often refer to the Iron Chef star as Momosan. And while his eponymous Morimoto has been a mainstay in Chelsea, he has plans to debut his first ramen restaurant called Momosan Ramen & Sake in 2016. There will be rich tonkatsu-based broths, lighter chicken ramen, and happy hours perfect for the Murray Hill crowd. 432 Lexington Ave.
